GRAND NEW PLAY HOUSE

Projected By The Co-operative
Photoplay Theatre Company.

ON WEST SIDE MAIN STREET.

Only Down Town Vacant Side
In City Secured For The Place.

The Co-operative Photoplay Theatre Company, a $100,000 corporation has been formed and its business manager, Mr. H. Frederick, is actively at work perfecting arrangements for the erection of a new opera house and motion picture theatre. The company has leased for a long term of years the vacant lot on the west side of Main Street, in the heart of the business section of the city. The lot fronts 70 by 190 feet on Main and has a Ninth Street frontage in the rear of Cook's drug store of 50 by 50 feet.

The plan is to erect the largest theatre ever in the city for motion pictures except when the house is needed for high class attractions at night, when the pictures will give place to theatrical performances in the evenings. Mr. John L. Shrode, manager of the Rex Theatre, and Shelby L. Peace are actively interested with Mr. Frederick in the project, which is already well under way and several thousand dollars subscribed. The subscription pledges will be deposited in the First National Bank and just as soon as enough stock has been sold to justify the erection of the building the contract will be let. These preliminaries will be attended to within the next sixty days. Two of the most prominent merchants in the city, are among the moneyed men behind the proposition.

The house will be all that could be desired. It will be two stories with basement under the entire building.
As heretofore said it will front 70 feet on Main. This will be divided into three parts, a 20-foot lobby and 25 store rooms on either side, running back 50 feet. These have already been spoken for. The lobby leads to the auditorium 70 by 100 feet, with a 40-foot stage in the west end. It has not yet been definitely determined what use will be made of the lot fronting on Ninth street, but this detail will be worked out by the architect. The building will be of brick and stone and the ceiling will be 30 feet in the lobby and in the auditorium it will be a great dome still higher. Negotiations are under way for making the second story into a lodge room for one of the leading orders of the city.

The statement is made that the Rex Theatre will be merged into this concern when the new house is completed. Mr. Shrode remaining as manager.

It is further proposed to take on other towns in a string of shows centering in Hopkinsville.

The need of a large theatre has long been felt in the city. An auditorium seating 1,200 people with a stage large in proportion will bring to the city attractions of a much higher class than have been possible heretofore.

Children and No Children.

While making up his juries Monday, Judge Hanbery gave the jurors an opportunity to make excuses for not serving. W. J. Ladd said he had a house full of small children and lived 12 miles from town and it was necessary for him to be at home at night. Noble Allen said his children were all away and that he was bound to be at home at night and lived 16 miles from town. With a twinkle in his eye Judge Hanbery said: "Now gentlemen, see how inconsistent you are and how hard you make it for me to accommodate you all. Here is one man who wants to be excused because he has too many children at home and another because he has none."

HOWLING
SUCCESS

Was The Elks Minstrel Show
At The Opera House
Last Night.

EVERY PERFORMER A STAR.

Standing Room At a Premium
And All Seats Sold a Day
In Advance.

The Elks Minstrel Show last night at the Opera House was a howling success in every respect. Every seat was sold as early as Tuesday and the company played to standing room only. Each of the 25 local stars was at his best and the audience was kept in an uproar from start to finish. Tom Underwood as middle man was at his finest as an entertainer and kept things moving from one good thing to another for more than two hours. An advance report can be only a brief mention, but there were no dull moments during the entire evening. Governor Bowen, the artist in charge, was immensely pleased with the way the local talent responded under his capable coaching.

Charged With White Slavery.

Ed Adamson, a young man who had been managing a wrestling match in Bowling Green, was arrested in Louisville Tuesday charged with violating the Mann white slave act by taking Rena Willoughby from Bowling Green to Nashville for immoral purposes. Adamson denies the charge and says the girl has tried to get him into trouble on previous occasions. He gave bond for $300.

PROVISION
INADEQUATE

For Sanitarium Work Says Commissioner Mr. Joseph Severance.

A second meeting of the Christian County Tuberculosis Commission will be held at Dr. J. E. Stone's office this morning. At the first meeting Saturday, the organization was completed by the election of Mrs. Frank Yost as secretary-treasurer. Dr.
Stone, by reason of being the physician on the board, is the President under the state law. A recommendation will be made to fill the one vacancy on the board.

The commission has in mind some desirable sites and will doubtless visit them today with Mr. Jos. Severance, of the State Commission. Mr.
Severance is not satisfied with the $600 a year provided by the Fiscal Court, only $600 being now available.
He says the law requires that adequate funds be provided and this small sum is not adequate. He will urge that a larger appropriation be made, or that some provisions be made to start the work.

Wheat Drops Tuesday.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—Wheat plunged heavily downward yesterday, extreme losses amounting to 8c a bushel.
Anxiety as to the chance of the Dardanelles being opened and suggestions that the United States would possibly yet resort to an embargo covering both ammunition and food were largely responsible. The market closed much flurried at $1.52½.

Corn suffered from the same reason as wheat. Besides, there was a big enlargement of the visible supply of corn. Export sales made oats relatively firm. Provisions gave way with wheat and corn. Pork, in particular was affected by sharp stop loss selling. Corn closed at 73½, Oats 56½.

Nonogenarian Dead.

about 90 years, died Tuesday near

ORATORICAL
CONTEST

Tomorrow Night Will Be Event of Surpassing Interest To All Who Attend.

DABNEY TIPPED TO WIN.

Round of Festivities Will Follow The Annual Fight For Medal.

The pupils of the Hopkinsville
High School are building high hopes upon winning the oratorical championship of Western Kentucky Friday night, with their representative Edward Dabney. There will be seven contestants from neighboring towns.
Large delegations are expected from all of them. Madisonville alone has written for 150 seats at the tabernacle and they will give their champion Sory Rodgers a great boost.

Tom Corbett, who bears the honored name of an illustrious grandfather, will represent Paducah and is expected to be a strong contestant.
Vernon Lynn, of Henderson, is also greatly lauded by his home papers.

Ernest Ford, of Owensboro, won the honor of representing his school from many contestants.

Ray Morris, of Dawson, is a strong contender for the honor.
The Princeton representative was selected Friday night. His name is Lee Beck and his subject is "Motherhood."

The judges will be from towns not interested in the contest. One of them will be Mr. Carter Alexander of Nashville and another Mr. M. M.
Faughner, of Mayfield. The third will be from Clarksville.

The meeting at the Tabernacle will begin at 8 o'clock and will be presided over by Thomas R. Underwood, president of the Senior class and son of Editor Thomas C. Underwood.

The entire expenses of the contestants and judges will be borne by the local school.

A public reception will be accorded the visitors at the Avalon at 10 o'clock, following the contest, and there will be a dance at Hotel Latham, which is just across the street, for those who trip the light fantastic toe. These festivities are being looked forward to with keen interest and many young people from out-of-town are expected to attend the dance.

FELL FROM TREE

And Neck Was Broken, It Is Said.

John W. Mobley, of Fairview, while pruning a tree Tuesday, lost his balance and fell to the ground, a distance of ten or twelve feet and sustained injuries which caused his death in a few minutes. It is said his neck was broken by the fall. No one witnessed the accident and when found lying under the tree he was unconscious.

Mr. Mobley was a citizen well liked by every one who knew him. He was about 50 years old and leaves his wife, one son and one brother, Thomas Mobley.

RESISTED
ARREST

Stephen Rogers, Col., Is Killed
By Special Deputy Ed
Jones Monday Night.

DESPERATE FIGHT AT ELMO.

The Officer Is a Son-in-law of Mr. Ed J. Duncan, of This City.

Special Deputy Sheriff Ed Jones, of the Gordonfield precinct, but who is temporarily living in this city, at the home of his father-in-law, Ed J.
Duncan, went to Elmo Monday night with a warrant from Esq. W. W.
Garrott's court for the arrest of Wiley Rogers, col., a son of Stephen Rogers.

Jones went to the Rogers home and knocking was invited to enter.
When he did so, he was attacked by Stephen and Wiley Rogers, others being in the room. The father struck him on the head with some object that almost knocked him senseless, but he was able to draw his pistol and defend himself. He opened fire and killed Stephen Rogers and backed out of the room where his brother had remained outside waiting for him. Mr. Jones, owing to his dazed condition following the blow he received, is not altogether clear as to details. One theory is that one of the negroes also had a pistol and fired several times at him. He bled freely from the wound on his head.
Mr. Jones came to town and was released on bond and went to Mr. Duncan's to recover from the nervous excitement in which the experience left him. Mrs. Jones is at her father's with an infant about two weeks old.

GOSNELL
PRESIDENT

Season Will Probably Open
May 15--Salary Limit
Will Be $750.

The director of the Kitty League
at a meeting held in Henderson elected C. C. Gosnell, of Vincennes, Ind., president of the league. Mr.
Gosnell is one of the best posted baseball men in this section of the country and should make a capable executive.

Five cities were represented at the meeting Sunday, namely, Cairo, Paducah, Owensboro, Vincennes and Henderson. It is practically an assured fact that the above named cities will be in the league. In addition to these cities Washington, Ind., Princeton, Ind., Hopkinsville and Clarksville may enter and make the Kitty an eight club affair.

The season will probably open May 15th, and one hundred and twenty games will be played. A meeting will be held in Vincennes next Sunday to decide what other cities will have franchises in the league and to make all final arrangements regarding the schedule, umpires, etc.

A resolution making the salary limit $750 was adopted Sunday, imposing a heavy fine on the club that goes over that amount. The resolution also provides that the number of players shall not exceed thirteen, only two of which, the captain and manager, shall have had league experience, the remaining eleven to be young "green" players.

Continue Attacks on Great Britain.

London, Feb. 24.—The Norwegian steamer Regin, coal laden; the American steamer Carib, with a cargo of cotton aboard, and the British collier Branksome Chine have fallen victims of mines or torpedoes from submarines in the waters of the war zone.
The Regin went down near Dover, the Carib off the German coast in the North sea, and the Branksome Chine was struck off Beach Head and is reported still afloat.

A large steamer is also reported in distress where the Branksome Chine was struck, but it has not been ascertained what brought her to grief.

The cross channel steamer Victoria, Boulogne for Folkestone, with nearly 100 passengers aboard, narrowly escaped destruction by a German submarine. The French minister of marine says a destroyer shelled the submarine and possibly sank her.

A Berlin dispatch stating that the American ambassador has presented the German foreign office an Ameri-

the settlement of the situation arising from the British embargo on foodstuffs into Germany and the German warfare against mercantile shipping finds partial confirmation from Washington to the effect that the proposals have been made by the American government to both Great Britain and Germany suggesting a basis for an understanding on this subject. These proposals have been guarded with great secrecy.

Reports from the battle fronts are meagre. The German victory in East Prussia is admitted by the Rus-

MUCH LIKE THE HUMAN RACE

Hindu Scientist Asserts Plants Can Be Made to Suffer Greatly With Their Nerves.

Except in structure, plants are much like human beings, Dr. Jagades Chunder Bose, Hindu physicist of the Presidency college, Calcutta, informed an audience in the conservatory of Columbia university. They are distressingly nervous, the least annoyance setting them on edge.

Cold weather is a nuisance to them, hot weather an affliction, and they dread electric shocks like a man condemned to the chair. In uncongenial company they become easily bored and droop with weariness, and when they can't stand it any longer they have convulsions and die in excruciating pain.

On the other hand they reciprocate love and declare their happiness to those in real sympathy with them.

Doctor Bose said he had learned these things and many more about plants by means of a machine with a "frictionless" needle, which he has invented. The machine enables him to feel the pulse throbs of plants and thus diagnose their condition.

Keep It Handy For

Rheumatism

No use to squirm and wince and try to wear out your Rheumatism. It will wear you out instead. Apply some Sloan's Liniment. Need not rub it in—just let it penetrate all through the affected parts, relieve the soreness and draw the pain. You get ease at once and feel so much better you want to go right out and tell other sufferers about Sloan's. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25c. of any druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief. Buy a bottle today.—Advertisement.

FAMOUS SWORDS OF TOLEDO

Admittedly the Best in the World, There Was Little Secret in Their Construction.

Many of the kings of Spain accorded to the finest swordmakers of Toledo certain privileges, such as exemption from certain imposts and duties appertaining to the sale of swords, the purchase of iron and steel and other primary material.

The steel used by the espaderos of Madrid was obtained in an iron mine situated about three miles from Mandragon, in the Basque provinces.

According to Palomeus, a Toledan swordmaker of the eighteenth century, it is an error to suppose that the Toledans preserved particular secrets for the tempering of their arms. They were compelled to use the water of the Tagus, as well as the fine white sand that the river contains in its bed. This sand served for the operation of what they termed "refrescar la calda," or cooling, for when the metal became red and commenced to throw off sparks the espaderos instantly sprinkled it with sand.

The blade having become cherry-red, they plunged the point into a wooden reservoir full of the water of the Tagus, and, having once cooled it, they straightened it as much as was desirable.

They then subjected such of the blades as had not hitherto been exposed to the fire, and when it began to redden they took it by the tongue with red-hot pincers and plunged it into sheep suet until it cooled, an operation that imparted temper to it.

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters

Tom Gallon, owner of the Master Key mine, dies, leaving his property to his daughter, Ruth, in care of John Dorr, the mine engineer, whom Ruth loves. Wilkerson, superintendent of the mine, plots with Jean Darnell, an adventuress, with whom he is in love, to deprive Ruth of the mine. He manages to secure Ruth's deeds and other papers, and thus succeeds in forging deeds indicating that he owns the mine. Ruth and Dorr borrow money from George Everett, a wealthy friend of Dorr's, to continue the development of the mine. Meanwhile Dorr and Wilkerson learn that Gallon's map showing a rich gold strike had been lost in a chest at sea. The letter furnishes the exact location of the wreck. Wilkerson and Mrs. Darnell, followed by Dorr and Ruth, take vessels and hurry to the spot. Wilkerson's diver recovers the chest, but fails to find the map concealed in the eye of an idol, which is picked up by a sailor and pawned as a curio. The idol was sold to an East Indian who sailed with it for India. Dorr, Ruth and Sir Donald Faversham followed and Wilkerson takes another ship, arriving about the same time. Faversham falls in love with Ruth and jealous of Dorr schemes to have him arrested in an effort to secure the idol from a temple. Ruth promises to "always love him" if he will secure Dorr's release. This he did and claimed Ruth as his promised bride.

CHAPTER XXV.

The Escape of Ruth.

AFTER his experience in rescuing John Dorr from the hands of the outraged priests of Bhalu, Sir Donald Faversham prepared to start the new day. He could not well realize just what had happened in the twenty-four hours that had just ended. It needed the commonplace details of a morning's toilet to make things seem actual. And what facts were there that changed his whole future? Ruth had promised to marry him! Faversham belonged to that great class of Englishmen who unite the virtues of careful training with an adaptability to circumstance which has made Great Britain the colonizer of the world. He was as formal in many ways as a clock. In others he could amaze the most impulsive and impressionable adventurer. When he first met Ruth he had had not the faintest notion of wooing her. His admiration had been frank and unreserved, but without any underlying depth of feeling. His volunteering to join John Dorr and Ruth in this wild search for the missing idol had been what he called a lark. It was only long association with her, the constant view of her pretty innocence and an occasional glimpse of her profounder and womanly nature that had touched his heart and awakened in him feelings that he had refrained from confessing to himself. Then came the moment when she had turned to him for help and he had been the single person in the world who could save John Dorr. Sharp and brief as had been the struggle in his own mind, it had brought him to an acknowledgment of the fact that she was the only woman he wanted for his wife. On the very tick of her hour of trouble he had ventured to ask his reward for service. She had promised, and now he, baronet and retired officer of the British army, shook like a boy at the thought of the happiness that awaited him. They met at breakfast. Dorr still showing the effects of his night's adventures, Ruth bright eyed from want of sleep and Sir Donald alone presenting the appearance of one who had begun the day aright after a sound night's rest. Their natural topic of conversation was of Dorr's attempt to capture the idol and Sir Donald's rescue of him. John could give little satisfaction to Ruth's minute inquiries, and the Englishman confessed that he himself, though much more familiar with the native ways and native temples, had not much notion of exactly how it had all come about nor how he had found Dorr and extricated him. "The only thing I gather from it all is this," he said amiably. "You had better take my advice in this country and not try to perform any of your western feats. India is a very old country, and they resent here anything that doesn't follow the good old lines. "I suppose I was very foolish," John confessed ruefully. "But when I saw that image right within reach I simply couldn't resist the temptation to grab it and try to escape."

Sir Donald looked at Ruth meaningfully. "I can't say that I'm a bit sorry, old chap," he told Dorr. "After all, as you say, it's an ill wind that blows no one any good."

Instantly Ruth caught his meaning, and her eyes fell. Yes, she had promised, and this brave gentleman who had risked his life for her sake should not be without his reward.

But she stared miserably at her plate until John rallied her and swore that he would yet get the plans.

"And here comes the fellow who will tell us what really did happen," Sir

"I suppose I was very foolish," John confessed ruefully.

Donald remarked, pointing to a much bedraggled native who had entered the compound and was evidently waiting for some one.

"That's my old servant," he continued. "If you will excuse me I'll go and hear what he has to tell us."

Ruth and John watched the two of them for some time, the tall, carefully dressed Englishman and the dirty native.

They could see that the latter was much excited, and toward the last Sir Donald himself seemed to lose a little of his aplomb.

Finally they saw him nod curtly to the native, who squatted down on the pavement. A moment later he had rejoined them. His usually placid face bore an expression of anxiety.

"What can be the matter?" demanded Ruth.

"Not anything for you to worry about," replied Faversham. "I'm sure I can arrange everything presently; but you certainly stirred up the priests, Dorr."

"Well, what do they intend to do?" inquired John, undisturbed, except that he did not understand a glance exchanged by Ruth and Sir Donald.

"It seems they have started a kind of holy war against us," the baronet answered grimly. "You desecrated their idols and they've excited a lot of the people against you and—"

"And what?" demanded John impatiently.

With a meaning look toward Ruth, Sir Donald faced Dorr. "This is not a place for Miss Gallon," he said formally. "The truth of the matter is, we are known to be stopping here and the mob will undoubtedly visit us shortly."

"But the police?"

Sir Donald looked very uncomfortable indeed. "My dear fellow, don't you realize that what you and I did last night was purely and simply indefensible? We tried to rob a temple, to be frank about it."

"I tried to recover some papers belonging to us," he protested. "We would have a stiff time trying to prove that to the officials here," was the reply. "As a matter of fact, I can't afford to bring this up. I'm still practically an officer and I should have a deuce of a time clearing myself. You can't afford to call in the police because you're an American, and you broke British law, and I very much fear killed a British subject or two."

"I see," Dorr assented thoughtfully. "But what are we to do?"

"Precisely, precisely the question," said Sir Donald. "You and I could slip away, but there is the young lady to consider."

"And the plans," said John doggedly. Sir Donald flushed angrily. "I am considering the young lady in this matter."

"And I, as her guardian, have to think of her best interests," was the retort.

Faversham tugged at his mustache in perplexity. Then he said quietly, "I think Miss Gallon has really put her interests in my charge."

"What—what do you mean?" stammered Dorr.

She impulsively turned to John.

At this moment there came from the street outside the sound of cries and yells and tramping feet. The two men looked at each other. With one accord they withdrew inside the hall-way.

"That's the mob coming!" Sir Donald said hoarsely. "Now for it!"

"We must save Ruth at all events!"

"Certainly," said Faversham coldly. "But I must plan quickly. Ah, here comes my faithful Achmet!"

The servant spoke rapidly in the vernacular, and Sir Donald answered in the same tongue. Then he turned to John.

"Bring Miss Gallon here quickly," he commanded. "Don't alarm her needlessly."

Ruth responded to the summons without a tremor, and when a few hurried words had informed her of what was afoot she turned to the Englishman and said simply, "What shall we do?"

"I am going to put you in charge of my old servant Achmet," he told her. "I trust him, and he will see you safe. Dorr and I shall have to go a separate way."

By this time the mob had filled the street without and was yelling for vengeance on the sacrilegious white men, punctuating its demands with an occasional stone against the wall.

Achmet bowed low before Ruth and with a gesture indicated that she was to follow him. She hesitated.

Sir Donald curtly said, "Hurry!"

She impulsively turned to John, and he saw her eyes filled with anxiety for him. That satisfied his wounded heart, and he urged her on.

When she had disappeared in the wake of the hastening servant Sir Donald glanced at Dorr and then said abruptly: "Come ahead! We'll try a back way out."

"We shan't interfere with Ruth's getting away, shall we?" John responded.

There was a glimmer of admiration in Faversham's eyes as he shook his head.

"No. Achmet will take her his own way. We go an entirely different one—if we escape the mob."

He had hardly spoken when the outer gate swung inward and there was a wild crush of struggling bodies between the high pillars. A stone struck the floor between the two Europeans.

"Come with me," said Faversham and drew Dorr around a corner and then inside a small entry. Another entry giving off this offered escape and they darted down it. An instant later they were in an empty courtyard.

"I know where I am now," Faversham said coolly and opened a gate in the opposite wall which led into a garden. Five minutes later the two men were strolling along a quiet lane out of sight and sound of the mob.

"They will destroy all our things," Dorr suggested.

"No. The hotelkeeper and the police will see to it that they don't. All they wanted was you and me. Failing to catch us, they will disperse."

"But where shall we find Ruth?" John went on eagerly.

"Achmet will take her to a camp of beggars outside the city," he answered.

"But how? She won't be safe with only a native."

"Safer than with a regiment of soldiers," was the response. "I know where the place is. Let's go to it. I guarantee that we shall find Miss Gallon safe and sound. I know Achmet of old. He is specially trustworthy because he is a Mohammedan and he doesn't respect idols any more than you and I do."

They finally reached the camp up the bank of the river and Achmet saluted before them.

"Where is the maiden?" demanded Faversham.

The servant rose and took the covering off a large basket. Ruth smiled up at him.

"I heard your voices," she said laughing. "Achmet thought I ought to get out right away, but I wanted to surprise you."

"And that is the way you got out of the hotel?" demanded John.

"Yes, Achmet tucked me into this basket and carried me right through all those terrible people."

"What is to be done now?" John demanded presently.

"I'll have Achmet get our belongings," said Faversham. "This gang here is his, he says. We can't do better than stick with them for awhile. I believe they are going up into the hills anyway. So much the better for us. Bhalu is no spot for you and me just now."

"But the idol and the plans!" protested John. "We know where it is today. Tomorrow it may be a hundred miles away or hidden past our ever finding it!"

"That is true," said Sir Donald. "But the safety of Miss Gallon is paramount. I will do what I can. Possibly I'll be able to do more than you think."

With this Dorr had to be content, but later when he and Ruth were alone he brought the subject up again.

To his amazement, Ruth seemed little interested and her manner was an odd mixture of reserve and timidity.

Gone was the old frankness and intimacy.

At last John said quietly, "I hope you don't think I was wholly careless of your safety last night. My only object was to get back your papers."

And Ruth, with Sir Donald's flushed face before her eyes and his voice in her ears, remembered her promise and was silent.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Wilkerson Again on the Trail.

IT had not been difficult for Harry Wilkerson and Mrs. Darnell to trace Faversham and his party from the time they landed to their arrival in Bhalu. But the idol itself, the object of their quest, still concealed its whereabouts in spite of the most minute inquiries.

"We'll simply have to watch Dorr," Wilkerson said at last. "We know he is on the trail, and we'll just follow him. Sooner or later we'll catch him."

Jean Darnell sullenly agreed, but privately confided to Drake that she thought Wilkerson had lost his nerve.

The climate did not suit her, nor the food, nor the primitive modes of travel, and her temper grew worse and worse. Drake promised to do some investigating on his own hook. He was once more completely under the woman's domination, and he dreamed of finding the precious papers himself and so putting Wilkerson out of the running.

Strangely enough, the man, weakly vicious as he was, was possessed by an honest and whole souled love for Jean. She knew this, and at times her tawny eyes rested on him with unmistakable affection, but she knew perfectly well that she would choose Wilkerson provided he made good by gaining the master key and uncovering the wealth of the great mother lode.

It was Drake who brought the news of the riot in the temple and the outcome of Dorr's attempt to steal the idol. "He was disguised and thought he could get away with it," he went on. "But the priests were too quick for him."

Wilkerson's shifty eyes narrowed. "I'll get that idol!" he boasted.

"I forgot to tell you that the idol isn't there any longer," Drake continued. "From what I could learn the temple wasn't considered a safe place for it, and it's disappeared."

"Where to?" demanded Wilkerson.

"That I couldn't find out. It was rather risky asking too much anyway, but a white man who lives with the natives hinted that they had taken it up the river into the hills."

With this slight clue both Drake and Wilkerson toiled unweariedly until they had established the fact that the idol had indeed been sent into another part of the country for safe keeping.

Then they prepared to follow, having found out that Dorr and Faversham had vanished and were supposed also to have gone hillward.

Mrs. Darnell most unwillingly consented to stay behind, but yielded when Drake set before her the difficulties and perils of the road they must take.

Both men promised to be gone only so long as would be needful to recover the idol, and to both separately she made it plain that she had gone as far as she would in helping them.

The two men found a couple of half-bloods to their liking and by judicious expenditure of money managed to get together a small band to accompany them into the hills.

It was impressed upon them that the trip was dangerous and that the hill-men frequently dropped what small pretense they offered of peaceableness and warred on friend and foe alike.

"The idol isn't there any longer," Drake continued.

It was through these also that they learned more specifically the route taken by the priests in charge of the idol.

Equipped at last, they started forth and for two days kept pretty closely to the river, which wound about through the hills, mounting slowly to its source in the mountains.

Several times they heard of Faversham and Dorr, but Wilkerson refused to turn aside or delay once on the trail of the idol. And at last they came within view of the little cavalcade which was escorting the god to a place of safety.

Vile as were the men he had hired, Wilkerson dared not trust them too far. He knew that they were superstitious, and he feared that when it came to a battle between avarice and inborn terror of the supernatural he would be left in the lurch.

So he warned Drake not to appear too anxious and by no means to let their followers know that they intended to seize the image and take it away with them.

"But if the papers are in that idol," Drake protested, "we ought to be able to get them and replace the old image, with nobody a jot the worse."

"That may be possible," was the response. "On the other hand, the plans may be concealed so that it will take time to find them."

They discussed a dozen plans and finally decided that the next night the two of them, accompanied only by their guide, should make the trial.

"But supposing they have the image, where shall we find it?" questioned Drake. "They have a lot of stuff in their packs, and you may be sure they have concealed the idol well. Unless they feared its being stolen again they wouldn't be going to all this pains."

"We'll find it all right," was Wilkerson's sole response.

The evening came when they were to put their scheme to the test. Their own little company made camp and after supper gradually went to sleep.

It was 10 o'clock when Wilkerson nodded to Drake, and they quit their places by the dying fire.

Outside of the circle they met the man who was to guide them, and one glance at his brutal face showed Wilkerson that he was once more confronted with a problem.

The man made no bones of demanding a large extra sum in compensation for his risks and intimidated with extreme plainness that in case his exorbitant blackmail was not paid he would not only not accompany them, but put it out of their power to go alone.

For an hour Wilkerson bargained and haggled, but all to no purpose. At last he gave in and practically stripped himself of coin, which the other pocketed without a thank you.

The three of them started forth under a glimmering moon toward the priests' camp, a mile or so away by a spring.

Half an hour's steady tramping brought them within eyeshot of the place, and Wilkerson went ahead to spy out the lay of things.

When he came back he roughly told Drake, in reply to his question, that the idol must be in one of the pack sacks lying about.

"It's a case of sneak up and get a sack each of us and then look for the idol in it," he said.

"All right!" Drake growled. "But it's risky business. In case of a muss where'll we meet again?"

"At our own camp," Wilkerson whispered and led the way.

When they came close to the spot where the natives were asleep the three of them paused and listened.

Presently Wilkerson gave a silent signal that no one was awake, and they crept up among the baggage.

The first two sacks yielded nothing and Wilkerson was reaching out for one that seemed bulkier than the rest when their guide coughed and instantly a couple of the priests awakened.

Seeing strangers, they gave an alarm, and one, apparently a soldier, fired off an ancient musket so close to Drake that he ineffectually dropped his burden and fled.

He heard Wilkerson cursing behind him, a couple of more shots and then took to his heels in good earnest as he heard rapid footsteps.

A moment later Wilkerson had caught up to him, panting and dragging the sack, which he had refused to surrender.

Between them they carried it on further and then rested in a slight hollow til their guide came up.

"If the idol isn't in this sack," Wilkerson said with a snarl, "I'll go back and shoot up the whole outfit and get it."

When the things were cut and the great bag opened the first object that met their eyes was the image they sought, glimmering in the half light.

The moment he saw it and knew that his quest was ended Wilkerson flung the rest of the stuff away and boldly got to his feet.

"Now for our own camp. We'll just see where those plans are," he growled. Drake and the guide both protested in vain.

Safely away from pursuit, they lit a light and examined their find.

"It's the same one," Wilkerson said triumphantly.

"Made of metal, too," said Drake slowly. "Now, where are the plans?"

"Inside of it!" announced his companion, beating on the idol with his knuckles. "Now to find out the opening."

It did not take long for him to discover the movable eye, and when he had pulled that out he thrust his finger in and withdrew it with a folded paper.

"Safe and sound," he exulted, dropping the image to the ground, where it lay staring grotesquely at the stars through its single eye.

The First Object That Met Their Eyes Was the Image They Sought.

Drake and Wilkerson carefully examined their find, and Wilkerson laughed almost hysterically.

"The gold isn't a thousand feet from the main tunnel of the 'Master Key' mine," he said triumphantly and thrust the plans into his bosom before Drake could see more.

"If those plans are lost or anything happens to you," Drake said, with an ugly note in his voice, "all our trouble goes for nothing. I am entitled to a copy of those plans."

Wilkerson laughed in his face, and the expression on his saturnine visage made even the brutal guide cringe backward.

"Give you a copy?" he snarled.

"When I've hunted for them all these years and suffered the agonies of hell on account of them? They're mine! All that gold is mine! Mine! Mine, I tell you!"

This last he almost shouted into the still air, and Drake drew back.

The man was mad.

"At least let them have their idol," he muttered, picking it up.

Wilkerson snatched it away from him with a gesture at once childish and murderous.

"I think I'll keep this for a memento," he cried, careless of who might hear him.

He stood up, the image in his grasp, and before the sound of his blasphemy Drake and the guide crept away in silent horror.

And not far distant Faversham sat vigilant by the side of his camp watching over the sleep of Ruth Gallon.

Possibly it was an echo of Wilkerson's savage cry of triumph that stirred her in her dreams.

She sighed and reached out one slender hand. It touched that of John Dorr and rested there as if she had found safety.

Sir Donald saw that movement, and his eyes burned with jealousy. But he did not move, keeping his ears open for the slightest sound, his eyes for the faintest shadow between his charges and the horizon.

TODAY.

"The Tangle," which was first presented at the Vitagraph Theatre, New York City, is a four-part feature above the average run, in that it has the Vitagraph standard of acting and photography. Margaret Lane, a society girl, finds in her sweetheart's papers a picture of his sister. Thinking the girl is a rival, in a fit of jealousy, she marries Colonel Everett, an elderly officer. Later Margaret meets the sister and learns the truth. She wants to return to her first love, Lieutenant Bradley, but he is honorable enough to refuse to break up a home. What threatens to become an unbearable situation is solved when the Colonel is killed in battle, leaving Margaret and Jack free to marry.

This picture is fortunate in having Darwin Karr and Naomi Childers in the leading roles. Karr does absolutely the best work in his photoplay career. His interpretation is forcible and likeable. Miss Childers looks the part of a society girl, a thing few actresses do. L. Rogers Lytton, who is as good as ever as the Colonel, which is saying a whole lot. Lillian Herbert distinguishes herself as the sister. Though the part is small, she makes it stand out.—New York Clipper.

THE MARCH AMERICAN MAGAZINE.

In the March American Magazine appears an interesting photograph of Thomas A. Edison, recovered from the great fire which partially destroyed his factory in December. The frame that surrounded the photograph was burned, but the photograph itself was uninjured, and Mr. Edison, as he handed it to the editor of The American Magazine, wrote on the margin the words "Never touched me." This comment is illustrative of the man's spirit for, as the whole world knows, he set to work immediately with incomparable energy and courage, to rebuild his plant. In connection with the photograph is published a chronology of the principal events of Mr. Edison's life, compiled by William H. Meadowcroft, who has been associated with him thirty years.

In the same issue Ida M. Tarbell continues her series of business articles entitled, "The Golden Rule in Business." This month she takes up wages and profit sharing and tells many interesting stories of individual businesses conducted in various parts of the country. Cleveland Moffett contributes another article in his "Doing the Impossible" series. This month he writes on "Living Wonders of the Deep Sea," and presents a thrilling account of the discoveries which oceanographers have made, fishing three or four miles down in the sea.

Ring W. Lardner, famous as the author of "Letters of a Busher," begins a new series of baseball stories. The first in the series is entitled, "Braves is Right," and is an amusing report of the Boston Nationals who won the World's Series last fall. Ellis Parker Butler begins a new series of boy stories, and of her fiction is contributed by Elmer E. Ferris, Mary S. Watts and David Grayson. The regular departments—Interesting People, Interpreter's House, and The Theater—are filled with good reading.

The prize-winning letters in a contest entitled, "How the War Affected Me," complete an issue of remarkable interest and freshness.

Clem's Sugar Crop.

Marion, Ky., Feb. 24.—A fine lot of maple syrup and maple sugar has been put upon the market in Marion. The syrup is selling at $1.50 per gallon and the sugar, which is made in half-pound cakes, at 25 cents per pound. The are a number of maple orchards in the county. One of the largest and most productive being owned by Judge C. S. Nunn, of the Court of Appeals, and Judge J. W. Blue.

Snow in West.

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 23.—A heavy wet snow tonight delayed traffic in Eastern Kansas and Northern Oklahoma. Many points in Kansas were cut off from wire communication.

Tuberculosis Victim.

Harland Bishop, a patient at the Western State Hospital from Calloway county, died yesterday of tuberculosis, aged 37 years. He had been here about three years. The body was shipped to Murray.

Round About Dorking.
The neighborhood of Dorking, where George Meredith lived, has many literary associations independent of its connection with that famous novelist. It was at Burford Bridge, near Dorking, that Keats completed "Endymion" in November, 1817; close by, at the Rookery, was born Father Malthus, the popular economist, and at West Humble Frances Burney, after her marriage with General d'Arblay, built Camilla cottage with profits of her novel of that name and settled down. Sheridan resided at Polesden and John Stuart Mill at Mickleham, while other illustrious residents in the locality in earlier times were John Evelyn and Daniel Defoe. To most people, however, the chief literary association of Dorking is with Dickens, for was it not at the Marquis of Granby's, variously identified with the White Hart and the Old King's Head, that Mr. Weller, Sr., made the fatal blunder of proposing to a "vidder?"—Westminster Gazette.

Fewest Battles in December.
December is the least belligerent month in the calendar. A correspondent who has analyzed the dates of over 1,000 battles of the world, from Marathon to Mons, finds that fewer than fifty of them were fought in December, and these few were among the least important and decisive. Scarcely one of them would be known to the proverbial schoolboy. On the other hand, July, as is only fitting, seeing that it is named after a soldier, is the most belligerent, with 132 great battles to its credit or otherwise, and is closely followed by August with 122.—Westminster Gazette.

Sprains, Bruises Stiff Muscles

Sloan's Liniment will save hours of suffering. For bruise or sprain it gives instant relief. It arrests inflammation and thus prevents more serious troubles developing. No need to rub it in—it acts at once, instantly relieving the pain, however severe it may be.

Here's Proof

Charles Johnson, P. O. Box 105, Lawton's Station, N. Y., writes: "I sprained my ankle and dislocated my left hip by falling out of a third story window six months ago. I went on crutches for four months, then I started to use some of your Liniment, according to your directions, and I must say that it is helping me wonderfully. I threw my crutches away. Only used two bottles of your Liniment and now I am walking quite well with one ease. I never will be without Sloan's Liniment."

FORTY FINE COWS

BURNED TO DEATH.

Shelbyville, Ky., Feb. 24.—Forty of the choicest cows and heifers in W. H. Curtice's famous Pine park herd of Herefords were destroyed in a fire that burned one of the big barns on his place near here. The bulls belonging to the same herd were in a smaller barn, which also burned, but they were rescued.

This herd of Herefords was recognized as being the most valuable of any in Kentucky, and as one of the very finest in the United States. Practically every animal in the lot had been a blue ribbon winner at various fairs held in different sections of the country.

Gen. Johnston's Slayer.

Princeton, Ind., Feb. 24.—John M. Willman, the man who, with his comrades of the Forty-eight Illinois Regiment, believed he fired the shot which ended the life of Confederate Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston, and thereby, perhaps, as many consider, changed to a great extent the history of the Civil War in the Western field, died Sunday at his home in Mt. Carmel, Ill., near here, aged 78.

Every Week.

PROFS. MARION & EDWARDS.

The School Is Taught In The Avalon and Is Free
To The Public.

The moonlight school at the Avalon is now under full headway with about 25 pupils and is gaining in popularity as it progresses. The school is being taught three nights in the week, on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Prof. J. W. Marion, superintendent of the Public Schools, and Prof. Pete Edwards, of the commercial school department, are in charge of the school. Both are giving their instruction free and the pupils are thoroughly pleased with the opportunities afforded them. Some young ladies are taking the business course under Prof. Edwards.

Mr. T. L. Metcalfe, who owns the Avalon where the school is being taught, is also a member of the board of trustees of the public schools, and he is enthusiastic over the good work that is being done in the night school.

The pupils are not illiterates, but young people who are seeking opportunities to acquire an education, their time being all taken up during the school hours.

Boosting Camden.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 22.—Hon. Johnson N. Camden, whose term as United States Senator is nearing a close and will retire him to private life in less than ten days, will in all probability be elected, two days before the expiration of his senatorial term, to the presidency of the Tobacco Growers' Association, which is now being formed in the forty counties of the Barley tobacco district.

The selection of Senator Camden to take the active leadership in this movement is declared by a number of tobacco men who have been in Lexington in the last week to be practically inevitable, because of the need in the organization at the present time of a man of statewide acquaintance and popularity and in whom the individual farmers of the state can feel a personal confidence.

MURRAY JEWELER ROBBED IN A WHOLESALE WAY.

Murray, Ky., Feb. 22.—Burglars Saturday night gained entrance into the jewelry store owned by H. B. Bailey, of this city, by prizing open the bars over the rear windows. Practically everything of value that was left out of the safe was taken. A large safe containing diamonds, watches and the most valuable jewelry was unmolested. It is evident the thief was in no particular hurry, because he took pains to lay aside all the engraved jewelry and the less valued articles, going so far as to only take the most valued pieces of combination chinaware, toilet articles, etc., leaving the rest behind. Discovery of the robbery was not made until Sunday afternoon. Mr. Bailey's estimates of the value of the jewelry taken was $200.

ARMED MEN WARN

PEOPLE FROM PULPIT.

Madisonville, Ky., Feb. 22.—Fifty masked men waited on the congregation of the Mt. Carmel church, south, at Nortonville during evening services Sunday. The leader armed, with a bundle of switches, accompanied by several comrades, carrying guns, asked permission of the pastor to address the congregation. The pastor gave his consent. Members were then told to quit smoking, drinking, selling whisky, gambling and to quit shooting at a church in the neighborhood.

"No person must leave this church for thirty minutes," the leader said. "It is safer inside than out."

The regulators then left the building and the pastor proceeded with his sermon.

COMPARES HEAT OF STARS

Scientist Says Stellar Bodies Are From 2,000 to 27,000 Degrees in Temperature.

During two years Rosenberg has studied photographically the spectra of the 50 most brilliant stars in the northern hemisphere, from the first to the third order of magnitude. By a comparison of their spectra it is possible to deduce their temperatures.

The results obtained agree well with those of Wilsing and Scheiner; stars of the helium type are the hottest, and the red stars are the coolest. As a specimen, the following temperatures are quoted: Sirius, 27,000 degrees; Vega, 22,000 degrees; Algol, 12,000 degrees; Arcturus, 3,000 degrees; Aldebaran, 2,000 degrees.

From the aspect and relative displacement of the spectral lines an idea may be formed of the pressure conditions in the atmosphere of the stars studied. Thus Adams has found that in the light-emitting atmosphere of Sirius the pressure is 12 times that existing in the solar photosphere, which confirms the hypothesis that Sirius is a simple mass of gas without a defined surface of condensation.

CAME TO PREFER THE MICE

Sad Tale of Man Who Tried to Get Rid of Pests by Using Cayenne Pepper.

In this hour of changing maps and making history and reversing civilization somebody slips in quietly and remarks that cayenne pepper is an admirable remedy for mice. All you have to do is to scatter the pepper about the mouse runs and the baseboards, and then let the sleek little nuisances sneeze their condemned heads off.

A man heard about this new cure some time ago. He tried it. He says that after he had gone to bed he could hear the mice gently sneezing all about the house, and for a time it was soothing. But even the sneeze of a mouse can get on your nerves, and when the man tired of the gentle "kerchoos" he finally arose in wrath and his pajamas and stumbled downstairs and brushed up the scattered pepper and flung it in the ash barrel, and then went back to bed and sneezed out two lights of glass and blew a crayon portrait of his maiden aunt clear down the back stairs, and half way through the china closet.

Pepper for mice may be a welcome diversion from the war news, but that's all it is.

TOWNS OFTEN ODDLY NAMED

Too Much Imagination, and Sometimes the Lack of It, Responsible for Peculiar Cognomens.

A fruitful cause of wonder and often of amusement as well is found in the names of hamlets, villages and towns. In many instances the lack of originality is the feature that attracts the observer's attention, and visitors to New England are led to comment on the lack of invention and imagination displayed in the naming of towns in this section. Names for most of them were brought over from England, and then the fathers varied these with such additions as "New" and "Old," and the points of the compass. For instance, we hear of New Haven, North Haven, West Haven and East Haven, and we have as many kinds of Hartfords hereabouts. There is an Old Saybrook as well as a Saybrook, and an Old Lyme as well as a Lyme. We have not only a Milford, but a New Milford, and a New Canaan as well as a Canaan. Thus it goes throughout the land of the Pilgrims and Puritans, while a journey through New York state is like taking a course in ancient Roman and Greek history, with Troy, Rome, Syracuse, Utica, and so on. These older European names, as well as the Indian names which have been preserved, show the inclination to use what is ready at hand, without employing either imagination or invention. In other places is to be found the opposite tendency, and it is when too much imagination or a misdirected imagination has had sway that names of localities often cause amusement, which shows the early settlers who stuck to the old names displayed better judgment, if a less active imagination.—Hartford Courant.

NOT MUCH

"Joe, are you married?"
"Boss, do you s'pose I'd be wakin' here if I was married?"

HIS OWN HORRIBLE EXAMPLE.

In a Muncie cigar store the other day a crowd of congenial spirits was playing rummy, the crowd including one whose congeniality had been largely influenced by over-indulgence in liquor.

In the midst of the game and before the contest could be decided he arose majestically, put on his coat and made ready for departure.

"Why, what's the matter, Al?" a friend asked. "You aren't going, are you?"

"Yes, I am," said Al. "I never could stand it to play in a game with a man that's drinking."

DOMINANT IDEA.

Mrs. Fatuns—I am going to Palm Beach this winter. It's a perfect Garden of Eden.

Mrs. Slimuns—Why, I imagined it was more dressy than that.—Judge.

THOSE FOOLISH QUESTIONS.

Green—So the trolley car killed your foreman. Did it run over him?
Grun—Naw! It bit him in the elbow and he died of hydrophobia.

GREAT TO GET RID OF THEM.

Father—Son, can't you possibly cut down your college expenses?
Son—I might possibly do without any books.—Hartford Times.

WITH MA-IN-LAW'S HELP.

He—I am not worthy of you.
She—Never mind that; I feel that I am capable of making all the necessary improvements.

PRIVILEGES OF WEALTH.

"I understand their dinners and dances are rather small."
"Yes; they're so rich now they can pick the guests they like."

She Stayed In Bed.

Ingram, Tex.—"Ever since I became a woman," writes Mrs. E. M. Evans, of this place, "I suffered from womanly troubles. Last fall I got so bad, I had to stay in bed for nearly a week every month. Since I have taken Cardui, I feel better than I have for years." You can rely on Cardui. It acts on the womanly organs and helps the system to regain its normal state of health, in a natural way. Prepared especially for women, it prevents womanly pains, by acting on the cause, and builds up womanly strength in a natural way. Purely vegetable. Mild, but certain in action. Try it. FINDS CAUSE OF SEASICKNESS

German Surgeon Has Traced It to Irritability of Nerves in Interior of Ear.

The eminent German ear surgeon, Professor Bruns, tested more than one hundred persons by turning them in a revolving chair. He has just reported that the symptoms were identical with seasickness. This is explained by the irritability of the three little semicircular canals in the inner ear which control the equilibrium of the body.

Tests of the central nervous system enabled Professor Bruns to predict whether "seasickness" would be likely to occur in those about to travel. Bruns and a physician named Fischer have found that this irritability of the semicircular canals and central nervous system can be controlled by atropin. It is said that when given as a preventive atropin will ward off an attack. During the attack this drug seems to stimulate the central nervous system rather than to paralyze the terminal or peripheral nerves. In this case caffeine might be substituted for atropin, or other drugs might control the collapse and prostration.

The theory that the semicircular canals have really the function of regulating our sense of equilibrium and direction has been disputed by many doctors, but the peculiar arrangement of these canals in the three planes of direction makes the theory more than probable.

PLANTS THAT GO TO SLEEP

Slumber as Much a Matter of Course With Them as With Human Beings.

"What a fantastic fairyland is a garden at night!" says Royal Dixon in "The Human Side of Plants." "Here we find many sleepy heads all so quiet and drooping that one wonders whether strange dreams may be fermenting in their plant minds. Perhaps they are! Some flowers, like the evening primrose, the datura, the night-blooming cereus and the moon-flower, are open only at night. What a contrast between these wide-awake faces and the numerous sleepy ones!"

"The leaves of the acacias, the lupin and clover are so tightly closed that one is reminded of the wings of butterflies folded together. Perhaps they are giving a 'fairy bed' to some poor, wayfaring bee or moth!"

"Look at the nodding nasturtiums bending their leaves as they bid us walk lightly lest we disturb their slumber. The sleep of plants is not the least interesting of the habits of these remarkably humanlike things. The leaves of a plant such as the clover, formed of a number of leaflets, will fold up not only in the night but even in the daytime if the light becomes too strong."

A COOL REBUFF.

"My heart's queen," said Mr. Wassery, who rather prides himself on being able to speak pretty phrases, "wouldn't object if I tarried awhile at the club this evening?"

"Mr. Wassery," answered Mrs. Wassery, severely, "I do wish you would talk sensibly. You ceased to be slender many years ago and fat Romeos are a drug on the matrimonial market."

NO INSINUATION.

"How did you come to say young Thompson was intemperate?"
"Never did say such a thing."
"You told somebody he drank like a fish."

"Well, what of that? Do fishes ever drink anything but water, and any more of that than they need?"

GOING UP.

"Sir, I wish to go to the rooms of the Great Moral Uplift Movement."
"Then you'd better take the elevator just going up."

DEAD BROKE.

"We are all dead broke out our way this fall."
"How do you all live, then?"
"Oh, we lend each other a little."

ANXIOUS ABOUT THE FUTURE.

Bobby (after listening to family quarrel)—Mamma, if a boy is good all the time he's little does he have to get married when he's grown up?

THE WORM ROLLS OVER.

His Wife—You used to say I was beautiful. Have I changed?
Her Husband—No; but I have—

AGED FARMER

Of North Christian Dies of Uraemic Poisoning.

John Riley Knight, a well-known North Christian farmer, died Tuesday at the home of his son-in-law, Mr. J. W. Caldwell, near Larkin. He had been a sufferer from diabetes for some time, but the immediate cause of death was uraemic poisoning. Mr. Knight was a widower and was 70 years old. His wife died in December last. The deceased was a member of the Baptist church. The interment took place in the family burying ground Wednesday.

Gov. Leslie's Brother.

Elison Leslie is a relative of Albany, Ky., where he is familiarly known as "Uncle" Elison. He is ninety-three years of age, being the second oldest man in Clinton county. Mr. Leslie is a brother of former Gov. P. H. Leslie. He enjoys good health, eats heartily and sleeps well, and makes a visit to Albany every day regardless of weather conditions. Until recently he was in the furniture business in Albany with his son, to whom he recently sold his interest.

CHURCH SPLIT

sign, and Wide Breach is Made in Membership.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 22.—The following special from Georgetown, Ky., is printed here today.

The Georgetown Christian Church, with twelve hundred members, is today minus a pastor, the elders and deacons and women of the church are holding the fort.

The split arose over the resignation of the pastor, Rev. M. D. Ainsworth, who had resigned to take charge of an automobile factory here. The announcement that he had decided to give up the ministry brought a protest and he made a proposal that he would preach each Sunday if an assistant was engaged to care for the general pastoral work. The proposal was favored by the women, but the men disagreed, believing it not for the best interests of the church.

Sunday morning the women presented a petition asking that the plan be adopted, whereupon the official board members resigned and the congregation accepted the resignations. The next step is undetermined.

Argentina announces that ammunition for military rifles will now be admitted duty free.

HARRISON DEFEATED

In Sixth Race For The Democratic Mayoralty Nomination in Chicago.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—Returns from Tuesday's primary election indicate that Robert Sweitzer defeated Carter Harrison for the Democratic nomination for Mayor by 70,000.

The woman's vote apparently did not affect the general result.

Carter H. Harrison, the present Mayor, was opposing Robert M. Sweitzer and six others on the Democratic ticket. Mr. Harrison was seeking his sixth term as Mayor. Harry Olson, Chief Justice of the Municipal Court; William Hale Thompson and Jacob A. Hey were the Republican candidates. There were 665,911 persons eligible to vote—447,199 men and 218,712 women.

Charles M. Thompson, Progressive party candidate, had no opposition on his ticket and had made no campaign.

The Seven.

(By Savoyard.)

Washington—Yes, they are seven all right and had the like opportunity offered—had it been as safe then as they imagine it is now—more than one or two of the seven would have done the same damage to the tariff bill they fondly hope they have visited on the shipping bill. Wise man, Woodrow Wilson. Had he not rushed reform through while his administration was in its honeymoon his policies would have gone the way Cleveland's went. The Arkansas Senator leads the seven. He is one of the gentry who used to fly to the rescue of Aldrich when the mighty Dolliver was hard pressing that boss of the monopoly party. The Hon. John Bankhead was never a doctrinaire. He is the friend, perhaps the follower, of Tom Ryan. The Alabama legislature gave him "instruction" the other day, that William L. Yancey would have heeded or he would have resigned his seat.

Hitchcock hates Bryan—that accounts for him. O'Gorman is angry with the administration because the New York patronage was not turned over to Tammany. Had Wilson helped the tiger, O'Gorman would have fetched and carried for Wilson. I rejoice that Camden is not a native of Kentucky. I hope he will run for Governor—he and his millions—with his stab at Wilson for paramount. By the way, did not our own and only and well-beloved Ollie James give him fits about it! As for Vardaman—one can only feel pity for him, the animus controlling him being so transparent.

Hardwick—"O, my son, Absalom! My son, my son Absalom!" And to this complexion has it come so soon! Only a while ago, my son, didst thou not rebuke the mighty Champ Clark for doing the identical thing you are now doing—going across the hedge into the Republican camp and doing your utmost to bring disaster and disfavor on the greatest President the Democratic party has elected since Thomas Jefferson? I wish the Georgia legislature was in session to say what that sovereign State thinks of your conduct.

Very well. They have defeated the Democratic administration as it now appears. They are on the Republican side of the hedge. They have made triumphant the ship trust. As Mr. Stone very truly said, they have brought the first complacent smile to the Republican countenance it has worn in several years.

When Was He in the Legislature?

"The legislature, pa—?" "The average legislature, my son," replied J. Fuller Gloom, "is a debating society wherein nobody knows what he is talking about, and does not care anything about what anybody else is talking about."

GOOD ROADS MEETING

Will Be Held at the Court House Next Tuesday March 2.

Pres. Holland Garnett, of the Good Roads Association, has changed the date of the next meeting from Feb. 9 to March 2, at which time Mr. Robt. B. Woods will deliver an address at the Court House. Mr. Woods was here recently, but very few heard him and it is desired to have a big rally on the date of his return. Mr. Woods is a fine speaker and is thoroughly informed on the road question.

BASKET BALL

How The Double-Header Victory Was Won.

Bethel College again defeated Guthrie by an overwhelming score in the Basket Ball game played last Saturday night at the Armory. During the first half the two teams played an exceptionally close game. Neither side could gain any marked advantage over the other. But in the second half the far superior team work and coaching of the Bethel quintette enabled them to throw goal after goal and this time they outclassed their opponents in every phase of the game. Too much cannot be said for the efficient way in which Mr. W. O. Soyars has coached the Bethel team. The girls also have worked hard to build up their team. The result of their work and thorough coaching was well shown by the final score, which was 17 to 2 in favor of Bethel.

BOYS' GAME.

The fast High School Boys Basket Ball team again triumphed over their Guthrie opponents in the double-header last Saturday night. The game, though one sided, was very fast and snappy. The Hoptown boys started off winning from the first and the outcome was never in doubt. No one player deserves especial honors. Although some made more points than others, the victory was a result of the superior team work of the whole. Mr. Soyars had been coaching the team a few afternoons and they showed a marked improvement over their playing in the last game with Guthrie. The score was 40 to 12 in favor of High School.

Basket Ball.

The Bethel Basket Ball Team and the High School girls will conclude the season with a contest Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Last year High triumphed over Bethel by a large score, and the Bethel contingent hope to re-establish themselves in the coming contest. Bethel has one of the strongest teams in its history and has played winning football during the season. High suffers the handicap of a lack of coaching, but in Misses Campbell and Brechtitt has two stars that will push Bethel to the limit. A fierce contest is expected.

CIRCUIT COURT CULLINGS

Very few of the commonwealth cases set for the first three days of court were ready for trial and but little has been done in Circuit Court. Richard Lewis, col., charged with malicious cutting with intent to kill, was tried Tuesday and given 6 months in jail and a fine of $50. He was charged with cutting a woman in a fit of jealousy.

Sam Jones, col., charged with willful murder was put on trial yesterday morning and his case went to the jury at noon, short work being made of the trial.

Only a Rumor.

A rumor was in circulation yesterday morning that Booth Morris, formerly a policeman of this city, had been shot at Wneatero, Ky., where he has been a mine guard for several years. It could not be verified and there was probably nothing in it.

Sisters Killed.

Miss Margaret Bacon, 58, and her sister, Miss Jacova Bacon, 56, both of Maysville, Ky., were killed instantly at Indianopolis Sunday, by a street car while on their way to church.

THIRTY-TWO LEGISLATURES

Considering Tuberculosis Laws ---Many Bills on Disease Being Discussed.

Bills dealing with tuberculosis are now being considered in 32 state legislatures, according to an announcement made today by The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

In 6 states, Alabama, Arizona, California, Iowa, Tennessee and Washington, bills are being considered which call for the reporting and registration of all living cases of tuberculosis. Alabama, Connecticut, Iowa, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia are working for laws which will require that consumptives who refuse to observe sanitary regulations and are a menace to others may be removed and detained in hospitals. In Alabama, Arizona, California, Illinois, Maine and Missouri legislation permitting the establishment of county or local hospitals for tuberculosis are being discussed, and in California, Illinois, Iowa, Maine, Missouri and New Hampshire state subsidies of $3 to $5 per week per patient are being asked for such institutions. A more or less complete reorganization of the state health work is sought in several states, especially Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, Texas and Arizona. In Indiana and Alabama bills providing for full-time county and city health officers are being considered.

As an aid in furthering these and similar bills, the National Association has issued a pamphlet entitled "Tuberculosis Legislation," which contains a digest of existing laws in this field with comments and comparisons of the most important ones.

HORSE BREEDING.

The enormous number of horses to be bought in this country for war needs in Europe should encourage farmers and others to raise them more freely. Military experts are being strongly impressed with the value of the horse. It seems likely that cavalry forces all over the world will be permanently strengthened. Home conditions are also looking well for the breeder. A few years ago predictions were common of a "horseless age" soon to come. Events have falsified them.—Newcastle Courier.
